The Interview

A young man desperate for a job lands up for an interview at a prestigious company. The position is excellent and the pay is promising. The catch lies in the interview itself, which is known to be unconventionally challenging.

Starting off as a slightly abnormal interview, we see how increasingly absurd this situation evolves to be. A simple room gives rise to an equally complex story - four characters and their eccentricities show us the limits of human greed and desperation. We see how incentives work their way into our minds and hearts, making us commit unforgivable crimes. An amalgamation of love, office politics, the need for money and the desire for power, 'The Interview' acts as a mirror for the audience's most vulnerable emotions.
